The train

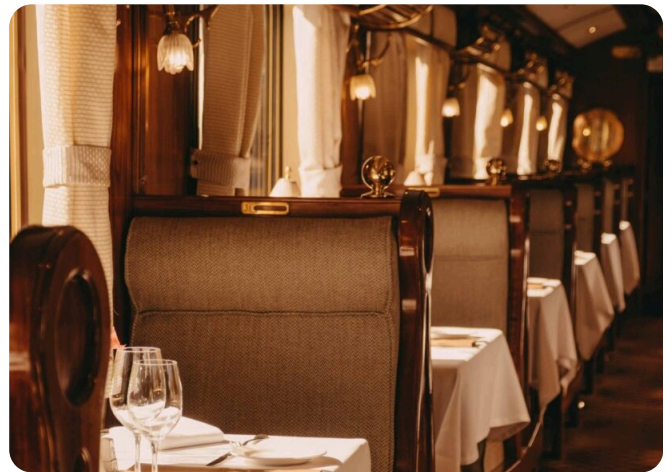

The carriages are styled after classic interwar Pullman cars, in royal-blue livery with gold accents. Inside, dark wood, polished marquetry, brass fittings and plush armchairs mix with handwoven textiles in turquoise and sunlit yellow, a nod to Andean craftsmanship.

The Observatory Bar Car is the social heart, where live musicians play guitar and the Peruvian cajón and guests dance as the train runs between the high Andes and the cloud forest. VIP lounges at the stations and transfers to and from the train are part of the experience.

Dining on board

Morning trains serve a light Peruvian lunch, such as corn ceviche, quinoa croquettes and beef tenderloin, with South American wines. Evening trains bring a five-course dinner, with vegetarian menus available.

Ingredients are sourced seasonally from the Sacred Valley and across Peru, and the bar mixes reimagined Peruvian cocktails. Let us know about dietary needs or children's meals in advance.
